

Ken Lackman & Associates
Educational Consultants

present Ken Lackman's

Lexical Generative Power Activities

An ESL Teacher Development Workshop

A new approach to teaching vocabulary that:

- ◆ deals with lexical chunks.
- ◆ requires no teaching or understanding of terminology.
- ◆ challenges students to find chunks and determine their usefulness.
- ◆ trains students to be autonomous learners.
- ◆ involves all four skills and is easy to implement.
- ◆ is fun, funny and very student-centred.

$30* 12 classroom activities!

*There is a group rate of $25 for three or more people.

Handout included!

Approved for TESL Ontario PD credits

Limited to 25 participants

To reserve, email klackman@kenlackman.com. Please note that, due to security reasons, you MUST register by email beforehand. You cannot just show up.

Registration deadline is the day before the session.

Wednesday July 4 17:30 – 19:00

Real Institute

424 Yonge St (2nd Floor)

You're invited to stay after the workshop for a Networking Party, which will take place in the Irish pub on the first floor.

Ken Lackman spent seven years in Prague teaching English and developing teaching materials for The Caledonian School. He left in 2002 to do the DELTA course in Wroclaw, Poland before returning to Toronto in 2003. After five years as Director of Studies at EF Toronto, he left to pursue a career as a freelance teacher trainer and writer. He has had several articles published in English Teaching Professional including A New Look at Listening, which was the feature article in the last edition. He also works as a CELTA trainer at Greystone College and an ESL instructor at Ryerson University.

Methods and activities for more effective teaching with less preparation